Radicalisation and Extremism

Katy Potts, Islington

- The Counter-Terrorism and Security Act 2015, came into force on 1 July, puts a statutory duty on schools to "prevent people from being drawn into terrorism"
- It specifies: "Being drawn into terrorism includes not just violent extremism but also non-violent extremism, which can create an atmosphere conducive to terrorism and can popularise views which terrorists exploit"

Extremism is defined as:

Vocal or active opposition to fundamental British values, including democracy, the rule of law, individual liberty and mutual respect and tolerance of different faiths and beliefs. We also include in our definition of extremism calls for the death of members of our armed forces

para 7 Prevent guidance

A teenage Islamist fanatic who idolised the Lee Rigby killers was caught in the street with a hammer and knife on his way to behead a British soldier, a court heard.

Brustholm Ziamani, 19, was stopped and found with the weapons wrapped inside an Islamic flag and had researched a series of military bases around London.

The knife, hammer and Shahada flag

He had planned to behead a soldier in an echo of the soldier Lee Rigby killing and to hold the head up so he could be photographed, the Old Bailey heard.

He had earlier shown an ex-girlfriend the large hammer and 12 inch knife shortly before his arrest and told her he was planning a terrorist attack and would "kill soldiers".

When arrested, counter terrorism police found a cache of extremist documents, magazines and videos on his phones and home computer in Manor Park, east London.

He had Googled terms including 'what is the best jihad', 'suicide bomber' and 'how big was 7/7 explosion', as well as looking up the potential blast range of different bombs.

He had also researched Anjem Choudhary, Rigby killer Michael Adebolajo, and former Guantanamo Bay detainee Moazzam Begg.

'Troubled' schoolboys' bomb plot foiled by mother

The two 15-year-olds wanted to bomb Buckingham Palace and Houses of Parliament but were caught when one of their mothers called the police

The youngsters had been buying chemicals, pipes and fuses online to make viable devices based on a recipe in the “Anarchists Cookbook”, Newcastle Crown Court heard.

In online conversations, they discussed going on a drug-fuelled rampage, killing families in their homes, making a beheading video and ending their days as wanted men.

They also referenced Lee Rigby, the soldier murdered by two Islamist fanatics and Raoul Moat, who shot himself in 2010 after going on a gun rampage in Northumbria.

I'm raging. Was sat coming back home on the metro after a day in Newcastle. There's two Muslim women sat opposite me and my partner. 10 minutes into the journey some horrible little bastard comes up to the two ladies and demand that they move for him, then tells them to get off altogether as he is English and he has a right to be there and they don't... And other such shite.

What happened next was mental. A few of us immediately told him to back off and leave them alone, then quite quickly pretty much the whole carriage joined in. Everyone from mams to students to nanas were telling this kid to leave the lasses alone and told him that he was the one that needed to leave, as he stamped his feet a little bit and half arsedly tried to argue that he shouldn't have to leave and we'd be sorry when the women blew the train up.

Challenging your 'friends'

Dear zzz

I'm writing a private message because I noticed you liked a post from 'Britain First' with a photo of zzzz and I didn't know if you knew anything about them. They have a huge number of followers and appear on face value to be a patriotic group. They are in fact a very right wing extremist group and they use their Facebook 'shares' to reach new audiences.

They posted a photo of a starving dog in 2014 with a link to donate to a charity to help, when in fact the money was going straight into their organisation; they pulled a similar stunt with a poppy appeal. Some members were in the BNP but considered it too moderate. Britain First advocates taking direct violent action against all Muslims in the UK. I would hate you, to be linked with them, even if only in a FB post.

The feeling among some is that Hampshire’s cohort of fighters has nothing to do with Portsmouth. Instead they point out how they are radicalised online, often through Isis’s skilled use of social media. “It happens in their bedrooms, no one can reach them,” says Thakur, mimicking manic typing on the bonnet of a parked car.

Abu Abdullah was behind an Ask.Fm travel guide for would-be jihadists that formed part of an attempt to recruit young Britons to Iraq and Syria.

One user asked him: 'I havent any traveling and i'm underage but what do you mean with no worries about money. honestly I don't know how to change money into tukish or syrian money. How does it work? I can't ask my parents or they will now [sic]'.

Sara Khan tells the Guardian that younger women may rebel against cultural practices using religion to challenge their parents' strictures on everything from arranged marriages to education. This can be problematic if they choose ultra-conservative sources as their guide. Such ultra-conservatism has gained ground recently while mainstream interpretations have been drowned out. "There is a feeling that the more hardline your interpretation, the more authentic it is, and that's not the case at all — it's just not true of Islamic law."

HOW SOCIAL MEDIA IS USED TO ENCOURAGE TRAVEL TO SYRIA AND IRAQ BRIEFING NOTE FOR SCHOOLS

Terrorist organisations, such as ISIL, are trying to radicalise and recruit young people through an extensive use of social media and the internet. Young people, some as young as 14, have tried to leave the UK to travel to join ISIL and other terrorist groups in Syria and Iraq.

As with other online harms, every teacher needs to be aware of the risks posed by the online activity of extremist and terrorist groups. This briefing note is aimed at head teachers, teachers and safeguarding leads and provides advice about online terrorist and extremist material. It includes a short summary of some of the main ISIL propaganda claims and identifies social media sites which ISIL is using.

What action do schools and teachers need to take?

Schools have a vital role to play in protecting pupils from the risks of extremism and radicalisation. Keeping children safe from risks posed by terrorist exploitation of social media should be approached in the same way as safeguarding children from any other online abuse.

- In the same way that teachers are vigilant about signs of possible physical or emotional abuse in any of their pupils, if you have a concern for the safety of a specific young person at risk of radicalisation, you should follow your school's safeguarding procedures, including discussing with your school's designated safeguarding lead, and where deemed necessary, with children's social care. If you are in a 'Prevent' priority area, your local authority will have a

Counter-Extremism

Extremism is not a new topic in education, but schools now have a statutory obligation to stay abreast of the latest legislation and developments, and to remain proactive and strategic. LGfL is committed to bringing the latest and best official advice to the attention of its schools through the work of its e-safety group and other expert partners.

NEW: video resourceBackground and ConferenceLinks and ResourcesBritish Values

In response to potential concerns from teachers, and in partnership with Sara Khan from counter-extremism and women's rights organisation Inspire, LGfL has created an open-access video resource for all UK schools: Counter-Extremism - narratives and conversations. It is primarily aimed at school staff, but may be deemed appropriate for use in Citizenship and PSHE lessons.

Sara Khan's views are often sought by government and media; in the new resource, she offers information, insights and advice to help schools navigate this difficult area. She highlights the fact that mainstream Islam and ISIS are worlds apart, and lays out principles that apply equally to all forms of extremism, including the far-right.

COUNTER-EXTREMISM
narratives and conversations

This resource should not only build professionals' confidence in safeguarding young people, but also help in challenging anti-Muslim sentiment. It is designed to be clear, self-explanatory and easy to use. It has been primarily designed with a teacher audience in mind, and is useful for class teachers, school leadership teams, and non-teaching staff alike. It will help guide higher-level strategy formation, but is just as helpful for provoking discussion and reflection on an individual basis.

Whether planning CPD for all staff, or meeting as an SLT to discuss policy in this area, schools are encouraged to visit Counter-Extremism - narratives and conversations
